Raising the concrete by bucket

What you see above is a drawing of the Akpe Cultural Center, as it will look when it is complete. We can't wait.

What you see to the left is concrete being poured to complete the first floor above ground. This spring, thanks to a successful fund drive in December, we have been able to complete this important stage in the project. This coming summer, once the concrete is cured and if funds are available, we will be ready to start raising the walls from the ground floor to this floor, and create an enclosed space for our dance floor.

Once that is installed and the infrastructure around it—plumbing, lights, kitchen facilities—is in place, the Akpe Cultural Center can start to offer the community and the world the best in arts education, while generating its own income!
